

Getting Started Links:

Homeschooling Resources from CCH

<http://www.classical-homeschooling.org/curriculum/home-ed.html>

Catalogs, curriculum, services, and other related sites aimed at helping families educate classically. A new feature is the links to colleges that offer courses of classical study in the Christian and Western tradition.

Homeschooling Resources from CE Loop Moms

<http://www.classical-homeschooling.org/celoop/helps.html>

Out of all the homeschooling books that the mothers on the CE Loop have bought over the years, these are the ones that have stood out; that have most helped in learning and encouragement in homeschooling; in learning and encouragement in classical education; in motivation and inspiration; and provided resources to enable us to do our jobs better.

The Public School Nightmare by John Taylor Gatto

<http://www.dvschool.org/psngatto.htm>

John Taylor Gatto, New York State Teacher of the Year in 1991 and author of Dumbing Us Down, traces the development and rise of the Prussian model of schooling, after which our modern public and private schools are structured.

Richard Mitchell, the Underground Grammarian

<http://www.sourcetext.com/grammarian/>

Dedicated to preserving the works of Richard Mitchell. When you are finished digesting this site, you will have a beginning of an understanding as to why grammar is so important as a foundation to all of education, and civilization.

The Lost Tools of Learning by Dorothy Sayers

<http://www.gbt.org/text/sayers.html>

This essay, really a speech given by Dorothy Sayers at Oxford University in the 1940's, is largely responsible for the snowballing resurgence of interest in Classical Education.

Classical Education & the Home School

<http://www.canonpress.org/pages/free.html>

This small book gives a brief definition of a classical and a Christian education (a more thorough treatment of this topic is covered in Recovering the Lost Tools of Learning, also by Douglas Wilson, and Teaching the Trivium, by Harvey and Laurie Bluedorn), and expounds on the component parts of a classical and Christian education, including the essential foundation of classical languages, Latin and Greek, and the core subjects of the trivium: grammar, logic, and rhetoric.

Preparing for a Great Books Education

<http://www.classical-homeschooling.org/v2/index.php?page=127>

Originally part of Mr. Callihan's Schola Classical Tutorials, Preparing Younger Children for a Great Books Education contain his thought and experience both as a secondary and university level great books instructor, and as a homeschooling father of six.

Classical Education Links

<http://www.classical-homeschooling.org/celinks/about-ce.html>

The links that follow provide information families seeking to implement a Classical Christian model of education in their homeschools can use. These lists may not be exhaustive, although we try.

Classical Education Books

<http://www.classical-homeschooling.org/curriculum/class-ed.html>
Books about Classical Christian Education to help get you started!

Homeschooling Classically

<http://www.classical-homeschooling.org/v2/index.php?page=21>
There is no doubt that homeschooling is a rigorous undertaking, so why do parents do it? The reasons are many and varied, the most important probably being that God has ordained parents to be the primary teachers of their children.

Classical Christian Curriculum

<http://www.classical-homeschooling.org/curriculum.html>
Specific curriculum suggestions for teaching and applying the Trivium, organized by stage or subject, and linked to CCH's Online Catalog in association with Amazon.com.

Classical Christian Homeschooling Discussion Board

<http://p199.ezboard.com/bclassicalchristianhomeschooling>
CCH's, own discussion forum, open to all website visitors and users. Discuss the practical application of the trivium to homeschooling, curriculum choices, and more.

Return to the CCH FAQ Index

<http://www.classical-homeschooling.org/faq.html>
The answers to Classical Christian Homeschooling's most frequently asked questions, from getting started in classical homeschooling to scheduling to the biblical foundation of the theory. If you have a question for Christine Miller, please visit this page first.

Getting Started Links © 2005 by Christine Miller

<http://www.classical-homeschooling.org/v2/index.php?page=216>